Administrative History

The Afro-American Program (AASP) was formally started in March 1971 through the work of the AASP Committee and Dr. Milton A. Gordon, who was named the first director. The Afro-American Studies program was introduced to add the possibility of studying Black history and culture into the Loyola curriculum. In 1990 the name of the Afro-American Studies Program was changed to African-American Studies Program and later changed to Black World Studies. In 2006, a major in Black World Studies was established at Loyola University Chicago.

Directors and acting directors who have served to date:

Dr. Milton A. Gordon, Director, March 1971-1977 (Chairman of the AASP Committee from 1968-1971.)

Dr. Cheryl Johnson-Odim, Director, 1978-1980
