Biographical Sketch

Doctor John L. Keeley was born in Streator, Illinois in 1904. After spending his early years in Ottawa, he went to Loyola University where he received his B.S. in 1927 and his M.D. in 1929. From 1931 to 1933, Dr. Keeley was an assistant physician in the department of Student Health at the University of Wisconsin, and from 1933 to 1936 he was a resident in surgery at the Wisconsin General Hospital. The opportunity to combine surgery and teaching came in 1938 when he was offered an academic appointment at Louisiana State University.

In 1941, Dr. Keeley returned to his alma mater as an assistant clinical professor in the surgery department, of the Stritch School of medicine. Four years later he was named a full professor. While at Loyola, Dr. Keeley was one of the early thoracic (chest) surgeons whose work laid the groundwork for the new field of heart surgery. By doing operations near the heart on the adjacent blood vessels, Dr. Keeley was doing pioneer work.

In 1958, Cardinal Stritch was hospitalized in Rome with a blood clot in his right arm, and Dr. Keeley was called in as a consultant. Despite the trauma of losing his arm, the Cardinal personally inducted Dr. Keeley into the knights of St. Gregory, a special honor reserved for those laymen who have rendered unique service to the Catholic Church.

The highlight of Dr. Keeley's professional career arrived in 1976 when he became a recipient of the 1976 Stritch medal for his work in the medical community. Dr. Keeley passed away on November 25, 1992 at the age of 88.
