Biographical Sketch

Gladys Kiniery was born in Footville, Wisconsin, one of eight children. She received her basic nursing education at Mercy Hospital in Janesville, Wisconsin, after which she was employed by the Children's Hospital of Cook County Hospital, the Chicago Lying In Hospital, and the Visiting Nurses' Association. Kiniery completed her Bachelor's in Nursing in 1936 from Loyola University. In 1940 she received her Masters' degree in Public Health from the University of Michigan. She became the second dean of Loyola's School of Nursing in 1947. During her tenure as dean she reorganized the school establishing a Department of Nursing and a Department of Public Health Nursing; oversaw many changes in the curriculum; and developed a postsecondary nursing education program in 1949 and then initiated a graduate nursing program in 1964. Dean Kiniery retired from Loyola in 1966, after which she worked for the Division of Nursing Education and Training for the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare where she certified nursing schools. Gladys Kiniery passed away March 4, 1988.
