Administrative History

University College was established in 1914 by Rev. Frederic Siedenburgh, S.J., as a division of the College of Arts and Sciences serving part-time students who attended classes in the afternoon, evening, and on Saturdays. It's original focus was on providing classes needed by teachers but also provided classes for the legal, medical, and dental schools. Originally part of what was called the 'Downtown College', University College expanded to become a separate school serving part-time students. Loyola's extension courses (Correspondence Study and Home Study) were administered through University College before being discontinued. Today, the legacy of University College continues through Loyola's School of Continuing and Professional Studies.

Scope and Content

The University College Ralph L. Pearson, Dean, records comprise 8.0 linear feet spanning the years 1952 to 1988, with the bulk of the records being from the 1980s. They include reports, minutes, correspondence, budgets, and memos relating to the daily operations of the college. Arrangement is alphabetical.
