Administrative History

In 1940, Samuel Stritch became the archbishop of Chicago, a position he would hold until his death in 1958. Cardinal Stritch had a special interest in Catholic education, and upon his arrival in Chicago developed a particular concern for the Loyola University School of Medicine. In recognition of his support and interest, the University's Board of Trustees named the Medical School in his honor in 1948.

In 1950, the School of Medicine was faced with a financial crisis. Due to the rising cost of medical education, the School was spending $2000 more per student than it received in tuition. In response, Cardinal Stritch established the first Cardinal's Dinner, a fund raising event to help defray the School of Medicine's deficit. The $250 a plate dinner attracted over 1,000 guests. The Cardinal's Dinner became a fixture on Chicago's annual calendar of charity balls and was attended by city, state, and Church officials and socially prominent and charitable Chicagoans. The Dinner was held annually until Cardinal Stritch's death in 1958.

In 1960, the dinner was revived and renamed the Annual Award Dinner of the Stritch School of Medicine. At the suggestion of Robert Galvin, Chairman of Motorola and Loyola benefactor, the new dinner featured the annual awarding of the Stritch Medal to a distinguished physician or medical researcher. At the 1964 Annual Award Dinner, the first Sword of Loyola was presented. This award was conceived of by Norton O'Meara, a Loyola alumnus, as a way to honor persons of national or international prominence outside the medical profession who possess the qualities of courage, dedication, and service exhibited by St. Ignatius of Loyola.

Since 1960, the Dinner has been held annually. It is distinguished by the funds it raises for the Stritch School of Medicine and by the caliber of men and women honored by the Stritch Medal and the Sword of Loyola. The Stritch Medal has been awarded to both to Loyola alumni and other distinguished physicians, ranging from the South African physician Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the first to perform a heart transplant to Dr. Eugene Balthazar, a Loyola alumnus who founded a free community health clinic in Aurora, Illinois during his retirement. Sword of Loyola recipients have included entertainers Bob Newhart, Jim Henson, and Helen Hayes, philanthropists Foster and Mary McGaw, Chicago Bears founder George S. Halas, and former Loyola University presidents Fr. James Maguire, S.J. and Fr. Raymond Baumhart, S.J.

Scope and Content

This collection contains records from four separate accessions received by the Loyola University Archives between 1988 and 1992. The records were created by the office of the Vice-President of Development and the Loyola University Medical Center Public Relations Department. These accessions were combined in order to create a comprehensive collection of records that describe the planning and evolution of the Annual Award Dinner.

The folders have been arranged alphabetically by title and the records have been arranged chronologically. The records describe many facets of the planning and implementation of the Annual Award Dinner between 1950 and 1979 and include information on the work of the various planning committees, financial data on the Dinner, and publicity generated by the Development Office. Folders titled "Continuity" contain scripts and timetables for the evening of the Dinner.
