Social and Education Information for Youth that are Not Documented

Young people who are not documented are sometimes called Dreamers. They often face a lot of stress for many reasons. One reason is worry about their chance to study beyond high school. One other reason is fear that they or a loved one could be deported. There are programs that offer information about resources. They can help people understand that others have faced these barriers and that there are ways to address them. There are also national groups that can provide helpful guidance about education opportunities and current developments regarding DACA:

Immigration Status and Your Health

Immigration problems can impact your health or the health of a family member or neighbor. Your doctor can help. This doctor's office is a safe place to talk about your concerns and find resources.

RESOURCES:

Legal

We suggest that you find and attend a “Know Your Rights” training that is offered by a qualified legal services group. If you cannot find a training nearby, you can look online for know your rights resources. Be sure that your family knows what to do if ICE agents come to your door. Be sure to make a safety plan about what to do if you are detained and you have children who need to be cared for.

High Priority! Updating Emergency Contacts

If you are a parent, you want to be sure that your children will be picked up from school by the family members or persons you wish should you be detained.

Important: Be sure that the Emergency Contact information at your child’s school is up to date with the name and phone number of the persons you choose. This will be the person the school calls if you do not show up to pick up your children and cannot be reached. You can usually update the contacts online at the webpage of your child’s school or school district. It can also usually be done in person at the school’s administrative office. You should be sure to update this information immediately!

DEVELOPING AND EMERGENCY PLAN

The websites below will help you to make a more detailed plan in the event of being detained unexpectedly. There are many other good sites on the internet as well.
